

John Johnson is working his low paying job at McDonald's.

A random customer, who thinks that a minimum wage employee should act like he works at a first class restaurant, gets angry and fights John over his apathetic work ethic.

As a result of the fight, John's uniform gets dirty. His manager, who treats his workers like he's a drill sergeant, demands that John get his uniform clean or he will be fired.

Panicking over the fact that he has no money to afford get his clothes cleaned
John finally remembers something.

John remembers that he installed an app to find nearby laundromats. He uses the easy to understand interface to find one. He decides on one that is only rated 1 star, but it is the cheapest option.

The cheapest option just barely manages to remove the stain and John goes back to working at his deeply unfulfilling job.

